A June Wedding.

Sargent-Eaton.

At the home of the bride's parents on Cottage street, Tuesday, occurred the wedding of Virginia Eleanor Sargent and Hal Roscoe Eaton of Auburn. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. R. Tenney of Auburn assisted by the Rev. C. E. Angell of Norway, the single ring service being used.

The bride, accompanied by her father, and preceded by the maid of honor, Alice Imogene Frost, entered the room at the strains of the wedding march played by Stearns' orchestra which also played during the ceremony and the reception following. Beneath the wedding bell they were joined by the groom, and Windsor P. Daggett, the best man.

The bride wore a gown of white peau de soie, entrain trimmed with applique of real lace and wore a bridal veil. She carried a bouquet of bride roses.

The groom wore a gown of cream silk tashmere, and carried pink roses. The bride's mother wore an elaborate gown of pale blue brocade silk trimmed with point lace, while the groom's mother wore a gown of black silk trimmed with jet. The ceremony was performed in the presence of the immediate relatives.

The decorations were very prettily arranged, being of evergreen, roses and white ribbon.

At the reception which followed punch and fancy crackers were served by four of the bride's girl friends, Etta Nevers, Winnie Hayes, Marguerite Finney and Lucy Sargent, a cousin of the bride.

They departed on the up train amid a shower of rice and flowers, a variation from the customary old shoes.

After a short trip through Montreal and New York they will return to Norway to remain until autumn, when Mr. and Mrs. Eaton will reside in Belfast, where Mr. Eaton has a position as principal of the high school in that city.

The features of the game were the one-hand catch of F. Sutton of a hot liner, and the work of Cushman, both in the field and at the bat.

Prize Numerical Enigma.

The answer contains 42 letters. The 3, 24, 23, is a solemn promise. The 7, 37, 4, is to regret or grieve for. The 10, 28, 14, 40, is a hard substance. The 20, 8, 19, 6, 27 is less than fifty. The 17, 9, 18, is time or day. The 22, 29, 1, is to move rapidly. The 24, 13, 41, 16, is to stop. The 30, 1, 30, 33, is soft earth. The 32, 12, 31, 35, is not far distant. The 33, 15, 28 is an habitual drunkard. The 42, 21, 2, is an enemy. The whole is a very good rule.

In this enigma all the letters in the answer are used once in the key words, but no numbers are repeated. The rule consists of nine words. When the answer is found send it by letter to "Puzzler" Box 55, West Bethel, Maine, inclosing a two-cent postage stamp. The letters will be numbered as received and opened, and to the first solver we will send "Our Jonesville Folks," by Josiah Allen's Wife; to the 5th, "Lady Diana's Pride"; to the 10th, "The Heiress of Hilldrop"; to the 15th, "Sybil Brotherton"; to the 20th, "The Armorer of Tyne"; to the 25th, "Gems of Poetry"; and to the 30th, "The Model Book of Natural History," the publishers prize of which was one dollar. All letters received prior to July 20th will be counted, thus allowing distant solvers a chance to compete for prizes. The answer to the enigma in the ADVERTISER of June 5th, is "Never put off until to-morrow what you can do today." Twenty-one sent the correct solution, and their letters were opened in the order here given:

Little Stories.

The Discontented Man.

"Life is so short," sighed the discontented man. "Here I am at middle age, and I have not succeeded in anything. If I could be sure of living long enough, I would start all over again, and I might accomplish something, but what is the use of beginning now?"

Suddenly his fairy godmother appeared at his elbow.

"I have heard your complainings," she said, "and you shall have your wish. Go and plant a grove of trees, from the seed, and you shall live, no matter what you may do, until they become tall, stately and full grown."

Here his fairy godmother vanished, and he went and planted a lot of acorns in a vacant lot.

"By the time these have grown to be stately oaks," he chuckled, "I shall have succeeded."

Ten years passed away.

The man had not succeeded in making any conspicuous mark in the world, but there was plenty of time yet. The acorns had become trees, but the trees were scarcely more than saplings.

Fifteen years more vanished into the past.

The man went out and looked at his grove of oaks.

"They had grown to the size of a stove-pipe and were beginning to look down on the fruit trees in the orchard adjoining."

"Well," he said, "I am getting to be old and gray, and I haven't succeeded yet. But I see I have oceans of time ahead of me yet."

Twenty years more dragged themselves away.

One morning a withered, decrepit old man, deaf and half-blind, hobbled out to that grove of oaks and peered up at them.

"Not more than half-grown yet!" he moaned. "Heaven forgive me—why didn't I plant cottonwoods?"

The Over-Confident Trout.

Mr. Trout thought he was an exceedingly clever sort of fellow, and among other things he believed he was a good swimmer.

One day he was caught by any of the fine gentlemen who came up from the city to fish in the brook.

"I am not afraid of any of them," he declared to his friends, "I shall never be caught by any one."

"You had better take care," they warned him. But he was confident, and was absolutely sure he could not be fooled.

Well, one day he saw a little black boy sitting on a board that crossed the brook.

"I wonder what he is doing there," said Mr. Trout to himself.

Then he noticed a nice fat worm swimming around in the water.

"Oh, here's my dinner!" cried the unwary trout, and in an instant he had gobbled down the worm.

There was a hook in the worm and a string tied to the hook, and a pole at the other end of the string, and a little black boy had hold of the pole.

The boy jerked Mr. Trout out of the water and high up on dry land.

"I told you so!" cried his friends.

"He didn't look like a fisherman," replied the sorrowful trout.

Moral: Things are not always what they seem.

Couldn't Trust Herself.

"I don't know what to say, Harold," replied the lovely girl, after a long pause.

"There are so many things to be considered. Did you ever care for anybody before you met me?"

"Never, Lucy!" fervently responded the young man. "You are the first and only!"

"Would you want me to go and live with your people?"

"No. We will have a little cottage of our own."

"You would be tired of me in less than a year."

"I wouldn't tire of you in less than a thousand years."

"Would you be willing to spend your evenings at home?"

"Every one."

"Always been such tyrants—and I've always been used to having my own way."

"You will never tell me I must or mustn't do anything?"

"Never."

"Always let me do just as I please?"

"Absolutely."

"Then I shall have to say no, Harold," the maiden said tearfully. "I never could trust myself with such a husband as that."

A Maine Tenderfoot.

An hour later I was passing the guides' cabin, when, with no intention of eavesdropping, I overheard the following conversation:

"Thought he wuz smart, didn't he?—d—n smart."

"Thought he cud hunt erlone, eh?"

"Was he lost?"

"Lost! of course he wuz lost. The d—d idjut wuz uz lost ter this camp ez a sinner is ter paradise," and I went along.

July 4th Old and New.

Not a drum was heard or a musical note blown on the day of the 4th of July. Not a hum of the hive or a whet of the scythe to remind us that farmers were busy.

So we took the old flute, which had long remained mute.

Since the Hayseed Band boys had retired, and played that old tune, Roll on, Silver Moon, which we used to sing round our camp fire.

We remember also of the sweet long ago as up to your city we hurried.

How we used to sing that jolly old man, As he roved in his old-fashioned wherry.

As he sculled along he sang that old song Wailing, jollying, dandy oh.

And out on a while he'd take a good smile From his little brown jug that set handy, oh.

When we arrived in the dock, down to Uncle Jake's docked.

For gingerbread, spruce beer and candy, oh, Then up the street we'd scoot, clad in blue drilling suits.

Just thinking that we were the dandies, oh, But those old times are passed for good things don't last.

Any more than will peanuts and candy, oh, But we hope e'er long to hear the old song Sung by all of our friends far and handy, oh.

So we will not fret as by the window we sit And watch all the steamers pass by Without any bands to remind us of this grand And glorious old Yankee Fourth of July.

Report of Committee on Resolutions.

A Good Thing to Know.

While S. D. Andrews was in Oconto, Wis., week before last, he heard a man telling about the serious illness of his wife and was given up to die.

He met a man who told him of a remedy which he tried and it proved successful in her case and others that he knew of, and as it is a simple remedy and could not injure anyone, Mr. Andrews thought it would do no harm to have it published.

Singing Bullets.

Are Harmless, but the Silent Missiles Cause all the Trouble.

"Don't be afraid of a bullet that you've heard whistle," said another old soldier.

"It sings in your ear rest assured that it will never harm you. It is a fact as any old soldier will tell you that you never hear the bullet which hits you. It is a problem of 'windage' as the boys in the army call it, the bullet is in the air, but let which you hear sing has already sped past you, and the bullet which hits you has passed before it got to you. It is a simple proposition after all.

The singing of the bullet is the atmosphere which is created by the resistance which the air offers to the progress of the bullet. This cannot be detected by the ear until the bullet has crossed a parallel line with the ear. It may sail over your head or pass close to the ground, but if it passes you at all, the only way to know it is by the sound of the bullet in the air.

To the soldier of many battles the voice of the bullet is as music. He knows that he need have no dread of the bullet that sings in his ear.

"It is the bullet that he does not hear that must be feared, and it is the bullet that he does not hear that he is afraid of."

No soldier ever heard the bullet that inflicted a wound on him. I was amused by a raw soldier who was attached to our command. It was his first time on the firing line. We were skirmishing and some sharpshooters were having some fun with a bullet that whizzed close to him. Faintly we could hear the crack of the rifle, but it was not distinct enough to alarm even a novice.

The singing of the bullet brought a blanched expression to his face. He did not wince, however. We were lying in the edge of the woods. A noise like a bullet whizzed close to him. "I don't like the sound," said the younger soldier. "Zip! Another bullet split the air close to his head. He was paler still. "Comrade," he said to me between bleached lips, "I don't want to be shot from ambush; let's charge a bit."

"I told him not to fear a bullet that did not like the idea of lying there in the woods and listening to the voices of these invisible messengers of death."

In an article on Camera Hunting, the fact is emphasized that among sportsmen a photograph of a wild animal in its haunts is beginning to be more prized than the animal itself. When this sentiment becomes universal the camera will have replaced the shot gun and rifle. In many respects, camera hunting fulfills all the essential requirements of true sport and is infinitely more difficult than hunting with a gun, and makes far greater demands on the patience, perseverance, strength and ingenuity of the hunter. The outfit of the picture taker is interesting in its manipulation and its use implies no restrictions of place or season. The only restriction is that the camera become as desirable as those obtained with rod or gun, the latter death-dealing weapons will be used only to supply the larder. If this condition could be brought about, with all hunting with guns prohibited except in cases of bears and moose, where bounties are offered for the extermination of certain species of animals, game and game birds would multiply and the question of supplying the larder, if that is all it is to be regarded, would be greatly simplified. There are two sides to this question, however, and between the absolute prohibition of hunting with guns and free-for-all conditions where there are no prohibitions as to how, when and where, there is a golden mean where the true sportsman finds all the liberty he desires.

The man whose temperament is such that he delights in the killing of game, and who finds no appreciable enjoyment in hunting that is not accompanied by bloodshed, the camera as a substitute for the gun would be unwellcome, but this temperament is not that of the true sportsman, and is becoming more and more rare as we get farther and farther away from the bloodthirsty instincts of our primal ancestors.

It cannot be denied, however, that there is an excitement in the chase, where human skill and endurance are pitted against instinct and brute force, a legacy from the days of the savage and semi-civilized ancestors, which is a legitimate factor in the analysis of a true sportsman. It is only when this feeling is allowed to run wild, when killing is done simply for the sake of killing, that we revert to the original type and do injustice to our better instincts.

The true sportsman goes into the fields and woods because he is a lover of nature and of the animate and inanimate things of nature; he loves out-of-door life; he finds pleasure in tracing the furred and feathered creature of nature to their haunts, to learn their ways and pry into their secrets, and then, above all, to those who have observed the amenities of nature, comes the supreme moment when the gun, or camera, has done its perfect work.

To the supporters of the idea of camera hunting, the work of the camera is much more enduring than the work of the gun; it affords after-enjoyment, not alone to the sportsman, but to his friends, and from this standpoint the camera would seem to be far preferable to the gun. For the camera hunter there are no game laws to limit the season or the number of shots he may take, nor is his amusement merely selfish as is too often the case of the man behind the gun. From the standpoint of the believer in camera hunting exclusively, the hunter may eat his cake and still have it for exhibition.

There is much to be said on both sides of the question, and while the idealist may stand by the camera as the only legitimate weapon of a true sportsman, the most of us will be satisfied to belong to a race of sportsmen who make both the camera and the rifle accessories to their enjoyment of nature, using the one where we may and the other where we should.

CAUSES OF HAY FEVER.

Haymell the Only Cure-Gives Change of Climate in Your Own Home.

Fifty years ago, hay fever had not been named, but undoubtedly people suffered from it as they do now with sneezing, profuse watering of the eyes, excessive running at the nose, intense smarting and itching and stuffed up feeling in the head.

The direct cause appears to be heat, dust and the pollen of flowers. Although hay fever may occur at any season of the year, it is most common and severe in August, and preventive treatment should be adopted some weeks before the time the disease is due.

Prior to the discovery of the remarkable effects following the use of Haymell, the only treatment that gave relief to hay fever sufferers was change of climate. The use of Haymell enables any one to breathe the air at home which is like that of the Adirondacks, the White Mountains or other health resorts where healing balsams fill the air with nature's germ destroyer, ozone.

Those who are subject to hay fever should begin the use of Haymell at once and thus prevent the disease. An ounce of prevention is worth more than a pound of cure in the treatment of hay fever.

Frank Kimball has seen the good effects following the use of Haymell in all diseases of the respiratory organs, and is willing to sell Haymell to any hay fever sufferer with the understanding that if it does not give satisfaction, the treatment will cost nothing.

The Heart of the Hills.

There's a wonderful country lying far off from the noisy town. Where the wind-flower swings And the tumbling brooks come down. 'Tis a land of light and of laughter. Where peace all the woodland fills; 'Tis the land that lies 'neath the summer skies. In the heart of the happy hills. The road to that wonderful country Leads out from the gates of care; And the tired feet In the dusty street Are longing to enter there; And a voice from that land is calling, In the rush of a thousand hills, "Come away, away, To the wood today, To the heart of the happy hills." Far away in that wonderful country Where the clouds are always blue, In the shadows, cool By the foaming pool We may put on strength anew; We may drink from the magic fountains Where the wine of life distills; And a voice from that land is calling, Shall find us there, In the heart of the happy hills.

CURING BEEF.

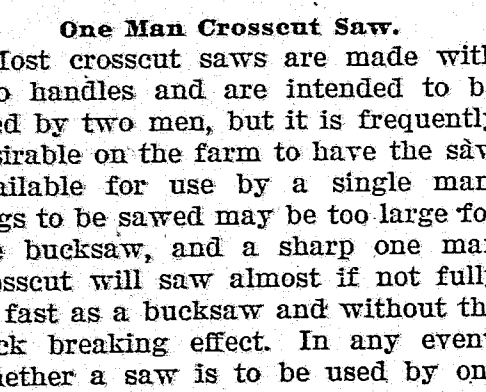

Dry Curing and Corning the Round.
Curing the Tongue.

Beef for dry curing should be well mixed through with fat and be in prime condition, freshly killed, but cold all through. It should be a clear red color of fine, firm grain and with yellowish white, firm fat. For drying it will be used only the tender side of the round, for, though it costs a few cents more a pound, it is many times better than the tougher side, which answers for corning.

Trim the pieces in good shape and then for every twenty pounds take a pint of salt, a teaspoonful of saltpeter and a quarter of a pound of brown sugar. Rub these well together, divide them in three equal parts and rub well into the beef for three successive days. Push in and rub a handful or two of extra salt in the hole where the string for hanging goes through. Keep in a vessel or tray and turn the meat every day in the liquor it will make. At the end of eight or ten days from the beginning it will be ready to hang in a dry place. Keep in a cool, dry place during the winter and before the flies come in the spring sprinkle with red pepper, wrap in newspapers closely and put in a muslin bag, tied tight. The outside may mold, but the mold can be scraped and scrubbed off and will not injure the flavor of the meat.

Tongues.
Beef tongues for curing should be well mixed with fat. Trim them neatly and to every twenty pounds of tongue use a mixture of a pint of salt, a teaspoonful of saltpeter and a quarter of a pound of brown sugar. Drop the tongues into boiling water for three minutes. When cool, rub them well with the mixture and sprinkle them with it as you pack them closely in an earthen vessel. Put a weight to keep them down and turn every other day, putting bottom ones on top. If they do not make enough pickle to cover them, sprinkle lightly with salt and let them lie ten days. Hang to dry, then bag away from the flies, like the beef—Farm Journal.

One Man Cresscut Saw.
Most cresscut saws are made with two handles and are intended to be used by two men, but it is frequently desirable on the farm to have the saw available for use by a single man. Legs to be saved may be too large for the backsaw, and a sharp one man cresscut will saw almost if not fully as fast as a backsaw and without the back breaking effect. In any event, whether a saw is to be used by one or two men, it is an advantage, says an Ohio Farmer writer, to have one end of it furnished with a two handed handle. Some small cresscuts are made with such a handle at one end (Fig. 1), but, if not, the ordinary handle can be removed from any broad bladed saw and a homemade handle inserted (Fig. 2). In use, the sawyer will, of course, hold the main stem with his left hand while with his right he will grasp the lower and forked part of the handle. He will be surprised at his increased command over the working of the implement.

TWO HANDED HANDLE ON CROSSCUT SAW.

The Dairy Calf.
In connection with the feeding of cows it would be well to remember that much can be done toward producing a good cow by feeding her properly when a calf. Calves which are being raised for cows should be well fed, but in such a way as to keep them growing without getting fat. Many a good cow has been spoiled by developing the beef tendencies when young. The principal point is to feed a highly nitrogenous ration and not overfeed. Sometimes calves on pastures will get very fat in appearance, but experience has shown that pasture fat in a calf or heifer will work off the fat made them permanently like the fat made by overfeeding in the stable with grain, particularly corn.

Bones and No Bone Mill.
When one has no bone mill to grind bones for plant food, a good way is to crack them with a sledgehammer and then at garden making time drop the pieces to the bottom of the successive trenches made in spading in land prepared for asparagus, fruit and long rooted growths generally. Or if the plow is used scatter some pieces of bone in the bottom of the furrow. In this way the effect of the bones will not be very active, but will continue for a long time.

Agricultural Notes.
Tent gardening, or the growing of vegetables under cloth, as estimated by the results of some experiments in Connecticut, is not particularly promising.

An outbreak of foot and mouth disease has developed in Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont and Rhode Island. Every precaution is being taken to prevent its spread.

There is an increasing demand on the College of Agriculture of Cornell University for young men and women as foremen on farms, truck gardens and in greenhouses.

Watch the wheatfields where the land is steep and fill in all forming gullies with small brush or cornstalks or anything that will prevent further washing of the soil, advises American Cultivator.

PASADENA'S SEWER FARM.

A California Town's Unique and Well Paying Institution.
Pasadena has a unique institution which other towns would do well to imitate. This is a "sewer farm" that is already more than paying expenses and bids fair to aid materially in balancing the yearly budget before many years are gone.

The sewer farm consists of 300 acres, five miles south of town, which were bought unimproved a few years ago, says the Los Angeles Times. The land was connected by pipes with the sewer drainage of the city, and now all the sewage is conveyed thither and spread over the ground. The result is that land that had been regarded as worthless has been made to "blossom as the rose."

The council has a special committee whose business it is to look after the farm. A superintendent, S. O. McGrew, is appointed and resides on the farm with his family. He keeps four hired men steadily and employs as many others as are necessary from time to time.

Recently the work of picking the walnuts was begun. This year's crop from city acres promises to yield about 350 sacks of 100 pounds each, which should bring a revenue of about $3,500 into the town.

Mexicans from the ancient village of San Gabriel are employed to pick the walnuts off the ground after they are fayed from the trees by the farm's hired men. It is an interesting sight to behold the senoras, senoritas and their less industrious husbands, sweethearts and progeny going through the orchards earning from 60 cents to $1.50 a day at gathering the nuts.

The farm has a walnut washer on the ground. The Mexicans husk the nuts as they pick them, and then they are carted to the horsepower washer, after which they are stored in a big barn on the premises to await the highest bidder.

Considerable hay is raised on the sewer farm each year as well as other farm products, and now ninety fat hogs call the place "home."

More land is constantly being laid out in products of all sorts. Several citizens have expressed their willingness to pay the town a handsome price for the sewage, but the council has found that it pays better to keep farming in the municipal family.

TOWN BETTERMENT.

Parks and Playgrounds—The First Municipal Baths.
Have you parks and open spaces and public playgrounds? If not, your improvement association must get them, for they are of vital importance to a town's well being. The influence of fresh air and nature on the moral and physical character of men, women and children is almost unlimited, for one cannot overestimate their benefits. Parks are no new things, and public playgrounds are being tried in various towns and cities with the happiest results.

A desire for public baths will soon follow these innovations, says a writer in the Christian Endeavor World, and Brookline, Mass., furnishes in this direction an admirable example to copy. The first municipal baths built in America, they are fully equipped with tanks of running water and a ladies' hair drying room, and the school children are obliged to take swimming lessons as part of their regular study. All this in a town of only 16,000 inhabitants.

There are many other needed reforms, such as a case, where social life may find expression, school gardens for the study of floriculture, botany, bee culture, etc., which are not impossible of attainment, because they have been started by the aid of improvement associations in places which before have been content to doze away unimproved of sanitation, dirt and the hundreds of innovations needful to a well kept town. When a society shows itself efficient, the town authorities usually aid with appropriations, and often beneficent citizens make generous donations.

Village Improvement.
In Wabunsee, one of the oldest towns in Kansas, whose beginning goes back to "border ruffian" days, a busy crowd of friends and neighbors gathered on Arbor day, each bringing one or more native trees, says the Christian Endeavor World. A week before some of the same crowd had met and fenced in a space which forty-five years ago had been set apart for a park and which at length was to be graded and planted on. How came it that the project, which had waited so long for accomplishment, was now to be carried out? The secret was this: At a Christian Endeavor social the question of village improvement was discussed, and the young people resolved to stir up the neighborhood to accomplish the long delayed work of fencing and planting the park, and this gathering on Arbor day was the result.

Improve Their Towns.
There are many town improvement societies in Massachusetts that are active in good works. They beautify the New England "common" which every town boasts. They labor to have pleasant railway stations built. They try to educate public sentiment in the matter of beautiful streets. They protest against the cutting down of New England elms and do all that can be done to preserve the distinctive character of their town as well as to improve them hygienically.

Prizes For Artistic Dwellings.
To encourage the beautifying of the city the municipality of Paris awards three gold medals annually to the designers of the most artistic dwellings. The owners of these homes are relieved of half their annual taxes.

Why They Scratch.
Chaff and straw and hay suggest leaves and seeds to the hens, and the fact that they find little to reward them does not prevent them from going on scratching until the litter is worn to a fine dust. They cannot find room in their small brain apartments for the understanding of the fact that litter is seedless.

To Pick Out a Layer.
When she sheds her feathers and we kill off the nonlayers, it is well to be sure and not slay a fowl full of eggs. When the rear bones are wide apart at the points below the tail feathers you have caught a layer. When they are close together, biddy is taking a vacation.

Doan's Kidney Pills,
A Modern Medicine for Every Kidney Ill.

Mr. T. H. Hughes, of Saxtons River, Vt., employed by B. F. Locke & Co., says: "My kidneys did not act properly for years, and I gradually grew on me. For two or three years they troubled me very much with a dull, aching pain across my back and in my loins. If I stood on my feet for any length of time, I felt the pain across my back more and my legs became numb. When the pain in my back got so bad that I could stand it no longer, I put on plaster, and I used a great many of them, but they only afforded me temporary relief. I used medicines of all kinds, but they did not reach the cause. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, and so well recommended, that I was induced to try them on a trial, and I got them at Andrew's drug store. They gave me immediate relief. After the treatment I soon felt my symptoms of my former troubles, but when I did I took a few of Doan's Kidney Pills and it soon gave me relief. I did not have that tired, languid feeling. I had more energy in doing my work and gave all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. They did me a great deal of good, and I feel justified in recommending them to others as a good and reliable medicine."

"GRANDEST YOUNG STALLION IN THE COUNTRY"

This is what the sale catalogue said of the horse,

DECORATE, "Every Inch a King"

Now Standing at W. J. Wheeler's Stable, South Paris, Maine.

DECORATE was foaled in 1890, was sired by Dare Devil 2.09, by Mambrino King, he by Mambrino Patchen. His dam was Jewel, dam of Lord March 2.11½, Point Dexter 2.21½. Jewel was by Almont Jr. 2.26, sire of 47, dams of 56 in 2.30. She was out of Feroline, a noted brood mare. Almont Jr. was by Almont 33. is individually a great horse—in fact as great as is his breeding rich and fashionable. He has a rich black coat, stands 16 hands and weighs 1000 pounds. In short he is every inch a king among good stallions.

From his magnificent individuality, his breeding and his way of going I have no hesitancy in asking the patronage of the best brood mares in Maine. He will stand for a limited number of approved mares at $25. All mares at owner's risk

BEST BRED FINEST CONFORMATION AMERICAN LAW, 33697,

The Sire of some of the Grandest Colts for their age ever foaled in Maine. American Law was sired by Heir-at-Law 1435, the fastest double gaited stallion in the world, his record at trotting being 2.12, pacing 2.05½, dam, Florence Chimes, by Chimes, who sired The Abbott 2.03½, Fantasy 2.08, The Monk 2.08½, and others in the 2.10 list, with 58 in the 2.30 list.

American Law was foaled at Village Farm in 1896, and today stands 15-2½ hands and weighs 1050 pounds, and is one of the finest finished and purest gaited horses to be found anywhere. In fact this conformation is fully equal to his aristocratic breeding.

Western Maine Breeders have in this richly bred young stallion an opportunity to use the best bred stallion that ever came to Maine, and at the very remarkably low service fee of $25.00 to insure a foal. Mares bred and not proving with foal will be entitled to free return service in 1904, provided the horse is alive and in my possession. Mares boarded at reasonable rates and assured the best of care and attention. Parties sending animals to be kept or bred must do so with the understanding that they waive all claims for accidents or escapes.

Pythian Sisterhood.

Pythianism is founded on the purest and sincerest motives. Its object is to elevate, advance and benefit humanity.
Its purpose is to gather together a class of people whose examples are such that admitted to its circle of friendship and fraternity. A class of people who can appreciate the true meaning of pure friendship, which binds together with a mystic tie all loyal members. It is a school where the truest and purest rudiments of life may be learned, and if in its circles are found any who do not live up to the standard of nobility and loyalty which its tenets teach, it is an individual fault, not a fault of Pythianism.

Prompted by a friendship and love born of Pythianism, about 25 sisters of this beautiful order from Oxford visited the Evergreen Assembly of this place Saturday evening, June 27. Some came in a large carriage and some by rail.
Supper of bread, cold meats, salads, coffee and pastries was served about 7 o'clock. At 11 o'clock in the evening Fraternal Lodge was invited in, and the freshments of cake and ice cream were served.

Just before Sunday morning's dawn the company broke up. The visiting sisters were taken to the homes of Evergreen Sisters, or to rooms provided for them near the station to remain until the break of day. The big team went at 2:30, the others leaving on the 4:22 train, except three or four who stayed until the afternoon train, Sunday. All agreed that a very pleasant evening had been passed.

The assembly of this place will hold a public installation in the Grange hall on the evening of July 11, and expect to observe Pythian field day with the Norway Sisters, July 17.
